Vinger-Venable Conservation Area: This parcel, a gift from Paul Vinger and Ann Venable in 1990 includes fields, a large meadow rich in wildlife, and a historic Quaker Cemetery (The Old Fry Burying Ground) that dates from 1770. This area was known as “Fryville”. Although there were Quakers (aka Friends) in Bolton before their arrival the name comes from John and Miriam Fry who moved to Bolton sometime before 1762. The newer burying ground on the west side of Berlin Road <sup>1</sup> was given to the Friends in 1844. A meeting House was erected nearby before 1789. This building was moved to Old Sturbridge Village in 1954 where it still stands. Decedents of the Fry family were very influential in Massachusetts and beyond. There are two benches in and around the Old Fry burying ground that were installed as Eagle Scout projects.

Rocky Dundee: This Conservation Area is Town of Bolton open space as a result of the FOSPRD (Farming and Open Space Residential Development) on Rocky Dundee Road. There is extensive land, much of it is swamp and a safe refuge for many forms of wildlife. The trail from Randall Road offers a very pleasant walk through woodland beside a stream, crossing over a brook on a recently constructed bridge and following a meandering series of bog bridges over rocks through a very wet area.

1 Rocky Dundee sign on Randall Rd.

3 The Pond off the shared driveway easement.

4 Monument on Berlin Road.

2 Crossing the brook in Winter.

5 Inside the Old Fry Burying Ground. There is another bench outside the stone wall.

6 Brook flowing in to Rocky Dundee from Gould-White.

Parking: The intersection of Randall Road and Rocky Dundee Rd on a grassy verge, at the Quaker Park or on a small area on the east side of Randall Rd (one car only).

Connections: Three trails lead in to the Gould-White area where there is an extensive network of paths that meander through varied terrain with vernal pools, a small cave and connections to Sawyer Road and West Berlin Road.

Suggested walks:

Short and easy: Start at Randall Road and follow the trail to the Old Fry Burying Ground where there are benches, take a break then walk back. Stopping to look at the Pond off the shared driveway <sup>3</sup> which can be a good birdwatching spot.

Longer: Start at Quaker Park, follow the trail via the burying ground and continue to Randall Road, then make a loop around the Gould-White area and back. Return to Quaker Park the way you came.
