Bowers Springs: One of Bolton's most popular conservation areas, Bowers Springs is a wonderful place for picnics, nature walks and cross country skiing. It is especially popular with dog-walkers and a dog waste bag station and disposal bin are located at the Flanagan Road parking area. Though there is no swimming permitted in either of the two man-made ponds, skiing is allowed in winter months. In addition to the ponds, the area features an expansive meadow and a large woodland which extends into Harvard <sup>1</sup>. Dog walkers, hikers, joggers, skiers and horseback riders all share the same well-marked trails. The trails connect to Vaughn Hills in Bolton and other conservation lands in Harvard (see the Harvard trail maps <https://harvardconservationtrust.org/trails/>). This whole connected conservation area was a joint purchase by the Town of Bolton and the Town of Harvard in 1973. Bowers Springs is also the site of the Tom Denney Nature Camp an outdoor program for local children sponsored by Bolton Conservation Trust.

5 "The Big Bridge" - High enough for Beaver flooding

Parking: There is a large parking area off Flanagan Road. GPS address 44 Flanagan Road.

Connections: Two trails on the west connect to the Vaughn Hills conservation area. The trails into Harvard connect to the Bare Hill Wildlife Sanctuary and eventually to the Mary Abbot Trail leading to Bolton Road.

Suggested walks:

Short: Circuit of any of the ponds.

Longer: Circuit of both ponds, and the meadows.

Challenging: Make a loop from Bowers Springs out to Vaughn Hills using the southern connector, climb the Hills and/or make a circuit of the pond, then return via the northern connector.

Very Long: The route of the Cross Town Trail North includes Bowers Springs. For more information talk to a member of the Trails Committee.
