Vaughn Hills form one of the highest land areas between Boston and Mount Wachusett. Trails circle the North Peak 1 which is second only to Wattaquodock Hill as the highest point in Bolton. Several routes lead to the summit. The South Peak is on private land. Vegetation varies greatly from pine forests, to oak scrub, to stands of birch and beech. Of special interest is the huge beaver dam frequented by birds and other wildlife. In the spring, herons and ospreys nest in the pond's dead trees.

The Hansen Property consists of an upland pine forest bordered by a brook on its western edge. A cart path leads into the property and ultimately to Vaughn Hills. This path passes the site of the old Sullivan cabin where there is a marker and a bench.

The Held Trail follows along the wooded edge of open fields and provides a connection between the Vaughn Hills/Hansen land and Bowers Springs. The trail is named after Rob Held, one of the leaders of Bolton's conservation work from the 1970s to the 2000s.

The Moen Property is a wooded area with a pleasant valley and connections to Harvard conservation land. It was acquired by the Town of Bolton with receipt of grant from Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs (EEOA)
